Mark your identity

At Medicare Australia we are always looking towards the future. That's why it's important for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people to mark their identity.

By answering the Voluntary Indigenous Identifier question that appears on all Medicare forms, you will be providing us with the necessary information needed to help us:

- improve access to health programs and services
- target specific areas of need
- improve access to benefits and payments
- improve our future plans and policies.

Answering the Indigenous identifier question is voluntary—it's your choice.

How to mark your identity

Fill in the attached Voluntary Indigenous Identifier form and send to the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Access section. Your tick is a tick for the future.

Privacy

The information you provide is held securely and is protected by privacy rules. When information is grouped together for statistical or reporting purposes, it contains no names or identifying details—your privacy and identity will be respected.
